Teenmag.com

<http://www.teenmag.com/>

The folks who publish Teen Magazine have this online zine site. Includes articles on style, guys, advice, real life and beauty & fitness. Very graphics-intensive and slow to load, so modem users beware.

A Girl's World.com

<http://www.agirlsworld.com/>

Check out this e-zine for teen and tween girls (ages 7-17 years old). Make a new friend through the International Pen Pal Club or earn some dough by completing their Babysitting Certificate Class. The site also features movie reviews, advice columns, and even recipes and crafts!

DansWORLD Skateboarding

<http://www.dansworld.com/>

This zine is maintained by a Michigan skateboarder. It includes links to the alt.skateboarding FAQ, a Ramp Building FAQ, and to a number of articles about skateboarding. There is also a multimedia section with a Net skater showcase. Dan welcomes contributions.

L.A. Youth

<http://www.layouth.com/>

This zine is published by a non-profit with more than 70 teen staff members and includes articles on issues like school, internships, jobs, community, family, friends, sexuality, and arts and entertainment. Bi-monthly issues include feature stories and photo essays. There is also a searchable "Teen Services" section focused on The Southern California area that provides contact information for arts centers, health and human services, job and volunteer opportunities, and recreation facilities.

Xenith

<http://www.xenith.net/>

This zine of poetry, prose, plays, and articles was started in 1997 by a teen girl who wanted to see what other teens were writing. Still going strong, Xenith has all of its issues archived on the site, and is constantly adding new content. See what teens and college students are writing, submit your own work, hang out on the message boards to meet writers from all over the world, and follow links to other cool writing sites. "No topic or style of writing is off-limits," writes the editor. "We publish, poetry, fiction, nonfiction, plays, essays, rants, experimental writing, and everything in between."

Empowerment4Women

<http://www.empowerment4women.org/index.php>
